Form 3A

Notice seeking possession of a property let on an assured tenancy or an assured agricultural occupancy in the private rented sector

Housing Act 1988 section 8, as amended

This notice tells you that your landlord would like you to leave their property.

For use in the private rented sector in England only. For tenancies in the social rented sector, Form 3 should be used.

Information for the tenant

This form has been completed by your landlord or their agent and explains the reasons you are being asked to leave the property you rent so that your landlord can regain possession.

Your landlord intends to begin court proceedings for possession of the property they rent to you, which is identified in question 1.2 below.

You do not have to leave immediately. If you choose not to leave, your landlord must apply to the court to evict you. If your landlord makes an application to the court, the court will decide whether or not you will need to leave. It is illegal for your landlord to try to force you to leave, for example by changing the locks or harassing you. They must follow the correct legal process.

You should read this notice in full immediately and seek advice on your options.

If you want to stay, you may be able to resolve the situation with your landlord or challenge the claim in court.

There is information in Section 6 on the next steps and where you can find advice. Section 6 also includes information for those with rent arrears and other debt problems.

Further guidance on this form, for both landlords and tenants, can be accessed at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/assured-tenancy-forms>

Note: If you have an assured agricultural occupancy you may have a licensor instead of a landlord. In those circumstances you will be a licensee.

Except in Section 5, references in this notice to a landlord include a licensor and references to tenant(s) include licensee(s).

Notes to the landlord

You can complete and sign this notice electronically or by hand.

Note 1.1: If it is a joint tenancy you must list all of the tenants.

Note 2.1: Before you can apply to the court to begin possession proceedings you must give the minimum amount of notice according to the grounds you are relying on, though you may choose to give more.

You cannot apply to the court for a possession order until the notice period has expired. If you are relying on more than one ground you must wait until the expiry of the longest notice period of the possession grounds you are using as set out in section 8 (4AA) Housing Act 1988. The exception is if you are seeking possession on the grounds of Antisocial Behaviour (Grounds 7A and 14), in which case you may enter the date you serve the notice and apply to the court immediately.

For guidance on the minimum amount of notice, see the Form 3A: Completing the notice seeking possession – guidance for private landlords at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/assured-tenancy-forms>

4. Landlord's reasons for asking you to leave

Your landlord must explain why they are seeking possession of the property. This means they must give you reasons why they want you to leave the property and give you at least the minimum amount of notice to do so.

They can only use certain reasons called 'possession grounds'. The possession grounds are in Schedule 2 to the Housing Act 1988 (as amended) and can be found in full in Form 3A: Legal wording for possession grounds which can be accessed at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/assured-tenancy-forms>

Question 4.1 is optional. It lists some common possession grounds which have been summarised to aid your understanding. It does not include every possible ground. Your landlord may tick the relevant box(es) here if they apply.

Questions 4.2 and 4.3 are mandatory. Your landlord will set out the grounds that they are relying on in question 4.2 and an explanation for using those grounds in question 4.3.

4.1 Common reasons for seeking possession include:

- ☐ You have rent arrears of more than 13 weeks or 3 months (depending on whether your tenancy is weekly, fortnightly or monthly) (Ground 8)
- ☐ You have some unpaid rent or are persistently late paying rent (Grounds 10 or 11)
- ☐ Your landlord wants to use or sell the property (Grounds 1 or 1A)
- ☐ Your landlord wants to rent their property to new students or workers (Grounds 4A, 5A or 5C)
- ☐ Your landlord plans to re-develop their property (Ground 6)
- ☐ Antisocial behaviour or breach of other legal requirements (Grounds 7A or 14)
- ☐ You have breached the terms of your tenancy agreement (Ground 12)
- ☐ You have allowed the condition of the property or furniture to deteriorate (Grounds 13 or 15)
- ☐ You do not have the right to rent in the UK (Ground 7B)
- ☐ Other (ground(s) not listed above)

Note to the landlord 4.1:

This is a list of common grounds for possession. To aid your tenant(s) understanding you can tick the boxes to indicate the reason(s) you are seeking possession. If none of the listed grounds apply, select 'Other (ground(s) not listed above)'. Provide the full legal wording for each possession ground you are seeking to rely on in question 4.2.

4.2 Possession ground(s) as set out in schedule 2 to the Housing Act 1988

Below are the grounds your landlord is using to try to regain possession of the property. Read this carefully and seek advice if you do not understand.

Note to the landlord 4.2:

For this notice to be valid, tenants must be given notice of the legal grounds the landlord is using to seek possession. Insert the full legal wording as set out in schedule 2 of the Housing Act 1988 (as amended) for each ground that you are using. The legal wording can be found in Form 3A: Legal wording for possession grounds accessed at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/assured-tenancy-forms>. The legal wording may be long so continue on a separate sheet if necessary.

Do not rely on the name of the ground only.

The guidance mentioned above also contains an explanation of the ground, published alongside the full legal wording. You are advised to supply this explanation here alongside the legal wording, as it appears in the guidance.

4.3 Landlord's explanation of why each possession ground is being used

This is your landlord's explanation of how and why they believe they are legally able to use the grounds for possession in questions 4.1 and 4.2.

Note to the landlord 4.3:

Write a heading for each ground you are using and explain in your own words why you believe you can use that ground. You should include as much evidence as possible.

If necessary, continue on a separate sheet, making it clear which question you are answering.

6. Information for tenants

Whether you want to leave or stay, you should seek advice immediately.

If you want to stay, you may be able to resolve the situation directly with your landlord.

Before your landlord can apply to the court for a possession order they must give you at least the minimum amount of notice. The amount of time depends on the reason they want to regain possession. For the minimum amount of notice required for the ground(s) that your landlord is using see Form 3A: Receiving the notice seeking possession – guidance for tenants accessed at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/assured-tenancy-forms>.

If your landlord goes to court, you will have the opportunity to dispute the possession claim.

There is more information on the process for possession (known as the possession action process) at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/renting-out-your-property-guidance-for-landlords-and-letting-agents/repossessing-your-privately-rented-property-on-or-after-1-may-2026>

When seeking to regain possession, landlords must also adhere to duties set out in Section 16E of the Housing Act 1988. Further information can be found in Form 3A: Receiving the notice seeking possession – guidance for tenants, accessed at: <https://www.gov.uk/guidance/assured-tenancy-forms>

If you are experiencing problem debt, a debt adviser may consider a Breathing Space to be an appropriate option for you while you work with them to identify a solution to your debts. The Breathing Space Scheme provides a temporary pause on creditor enforcement action to give you time to speak to a debt adviser about how to address your debts.

If you are in a Breathing Space moratorium under the Debt Respite Scheme, your landlord must speak to your debt adviser instead of contacting you directly about you owing rent.

A standard breathing space lasts up to 60 days. During this time, your landlord cannot give you notice to start the possession process on grounds related to owing rent (rent arrears). Once your Breathing Space comes to an end, your landlord will be notified and can continue or begin any enforcement action on the rent owed.

If the notice is not about owing rent and if you are in a Breathing Space, show your debt adviser this notice to notify them of the change in your circumstances.

Breathing space is not a payment holiday and you should still pay ongoing liabilities, including ongoing rent payments, as they fall due.
